DETAILED ACTION

This is the First Office Action in response to the above identified patent application filed on March 5, 2003.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Searles (US Patent 1,561,443).

Searles discloses a bearing assembly having an inner ring (5) mounted on a shaft (9), the inner ring having a plurality of fingers defined by slots (11), a compressible locking collar positioned circumferentially about the fingers, the collar having a large inside diameter and a small inside diameter, the large diameter having an axial length smaller than the fingers, the large diameter sized to fit over and engage the fingers, the small diameter sized to define a radial wall for engaging an end wall of the fingers, the locking collar having a fastener screw operable for causing the large diameter of the locking collar to compress the fingers into locking engagement with the shaft.

With respect to the limitation defining the collar as "compressible," the locking collar of Searles is compressed by rotating the screw so as to reduce the effective inner diameter of the collar.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Searles (US Patent 1,561,443) in view of LaRou et al. (US Patent 4,537,519).

In the event applicant amends the claims to more specifically define the collar as being resiliently disposed about the fingers so the screw reduces the inside diameter of the collar, the claims would again be rejected based on the teachings of LaRou et al.

Searles does not show the locking collar being resilient such that the screw reduces the inside diameter of the collar to compress the fingers onto the shaft, but providing resilient locking collars as illustrated by applicant was known in the art. For example, the prior art to LaRou et al. teaches a resilient locking collar as described above. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the locking collar of Searles as to be resiliently compressible by a screw, as taught by LaRou et al., motivation being to reduce the size of the collar by eliminating the need for a radially extending screw.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Note the locking collars of Bowne ('877), Stanley ('930), and Larson ('671).
